

On the occasion of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Seventh World Congress of the Communist International, this pamphlet reassesses the historic impact of the tactical shift made at that Congress.

The theoretical basis of the United Front Against Fascism is examined and compared to the practical results of that policy.

The foreign policy of the Soviet Union and its policy of collective security is examined and compared to the early foreign policy of the Soviet Union.

The impact of these policies on the Second World War and its aftermath are assessed.
