

"No one should dare feel that he knows what Russia means until he has read this book... It is fascinating reading."—Hartford Times,

THE VERY REVEREND HEWLETT JOHNSON, Dean of Canterbury, was born in 1874, the son of a prosperous middle-class manufacturing family, in Manchester, England. After taking his first degree in science and engineering he studied at Oxford intending to combine the careers of missionary and engineer. Instead of carrying out this plan he entered the ministry and after nineteen years was appointed to his present post as Dean of the greatest cathedral in England.

With his wife, whose many sketches and maps enliven this book. Dr. Johnson made several extensive trips through the Soviet Union, thoroughly familiar with old Russia, he was able to evaluate the great changes which have taken place since the Revolution. On many occasions he has espoused the course of friendly relations with the U.S.S.R. and is known as a staunch champion of peace, consistently standing on the side of progress and labor.

Theodore Dreiser—"No work on Russia has impressed me as much as this."

Dr. Harry F. Ward—"It is my judgment that this book by Dean Johnson is the most successful in catching and conveying the spirit of the people of the Soviet Union, and is the most useful of the present time for the average American reader."

Corliss Lamont—"Hewlett Johnson has written one of the few must books."

New York Herald Tribune—"Dean Johnson has lived in Russia and when he quotes statistics or speeches it is usually to drive home a point based on his own direct observation."
